

Module: II

Week 2 Assignment

1. Peer pressure can best be described as:

- a) Self-motivation
- b) Family expectations
- c) Personal decision-making
- d) Influence from peers to act in certain ways

Answer: d

Explanation: Peer pressure refers to the influence that friends, classmates, or people of a similar age have on an individual's thoughts, attitudes, or behaviour. This influence can encourage someone to adopt certain habits, beliefs, or actions. Peer pressure is not always negative; it can also motivate individuals to develop healthy habits, improve academically, or participate in positive activities. The key feature of peer pressure is that the behaviour is influenced by peers rather than being entirely self-directed.

2. Assertiveness helps individuals to:

- a) Please everyone
- b) Express thoughts respectfully
- c) Avoid communication
- d) Dominate others

Answer: b

Explanation: Assertiveness is an important communication skill that enables individuals to express their thoughts, feelings, opinions, and needs in a clear, confident, and respectful manner. It allows people to stand up for themselves without being aggressive or disrespectful toward others. Assertive individuals communicate honestly while respecting the rights and feelings of others, which helps build healthy relationships and resolve conflicts effectively.

3. Which factor strongly affects body image in adolescents?

- a) Media influence
- b) Weather
- c) Food habits only
- d) Sleep cycle

Answer: a

Explanation: Media, including television, movies, advertisements, and especially social media, has a significant influence on adolescents' body image. Young people are often exposed to unrealistic beauty standards and edited images that create pressure to look a certain way. Constant comparison with these idealized images can lead to dissatisfaction with one's appearance, reduced self-esteem, and increased concerns about body shape and weight.

4. What is the purpose of mindfulness?

- a) Focus on past mistakes
- b) Worry about future

c) Stay present in the moment

d) Avoid emotions

Answer: c

Explanation: Mindfulness is the practice of focusing attention on the present moment with openness and without judgment. It encourages individuals to become aware of their thoughts, emotions, and physical sensations as they occur instead of dwelling on past experiences or worrying about future events. Practicing mindfulness helps reduce stress, improve emotional regulation, increase concentration, and promote overall psychological well-being.

5. Which is a relaxation technique?

a) Meditation

b) Overthinking

c) Isolation

d) Procrastination

Answer: a

Explanation: Meditation is a widely practiced relaxation technique that helps calm the mind and body. During meditation, individuals focus their attention on their breathing, a particular thought, or an object, allowing distracting thoughts to pass without judgment. Regular meditation reduces stress, improves emotional balance, enhances concentration, and promotes both physical and mental relaxation.

6. Emotional regulation refers to:

a) Suppressing all emotions

b) Ignoring feelings

c) Expressing anger freely

d) Managing emotions effectively

Answer: d

Explanation: Emotional regulation is the ability to recognize, understand, and manage one's emotions in a healthy and constructive manner. It does not mean suppressing or ignoring emotions but rather expressing them appropriately according to the situation. Good emotional regulation helps individuals cope with stress, make better decisions, maintain healthy relationships, and respond calmly to challenging situations.

7. A student's peers encourage her to join a study group and maintain a healthier routine. Although she initially feels hesitant, the decision aligns with her personal goals and helps her develop better habits. Which aspect most strongly indicates that this is positive peer pressure?

A. She agrees because she does not want to be excluded from the group.

B. She feels nervous before making the decision.

C. The influence aligns with her values and contributes to personal growth.

D. She changes her behaviour primarily to gain approval from her peers.

Answer: C

Explanation: Positive peer pressure occurs when the influence of peers encourages behaviours that are beneficial and support an individual's personal values and goals. In this situation, the student's decision to join the study group and adopt healthier habits contributes to her academic success and overall well-being. Since the influence promotes personal growth and aligns with her own aspirations rather than forcing her to seek approval, it is an example of positive peer pressure.

8. Active listening involves:

- a) Interrupting others
- b) Judging quickly
- c) Paying full attention
- d) Ignoring body language

Answer: c

Explanation: Active listening is the process of fully concentrating on what another person is saying, understanding the message, and responding thoughtfully. It includes maintaining eye contact, observing body language, avoiding interruptions, asking relevant questions, and providing appropriate feedback. Active listening strengthens communication, builds trust, reduces misunderstandings, and improves relationships.

9. Building self-esteem means:

- a) Comparing with others
- b) Accepting oneself
- c) Seeking validation only
- d) Avoiding challenges

Answer: b) Accepting oneself

Explanation: Building self-esteem involves developing a healthy sense of self-worth by recognizing and accepting both one's strengths and limitations. Individuals with good self-esteem appreciate themselves without constantly comparing themselves to others or relying solely on external praise. Self-acceptance encourages confidence, resilience, willingness to face challenges, and overall psychological well-being.

10. Why can body image concerns feel more intense during adolescence?

- A. Adolescents experience very few emotional changes.
- B. Heightened emotional volatility can amplify concerns about appearance and self-worth.
- C. Adolescents do not care about their appearance.
- D. Mood swings reduce concerns about self-worth.

Answer: B.

Explanation : Adolescence is a period of rapid physical, emotional, and psychological development. Hormonal changes, increased self-awareness, and a greater desire for social acceptance make adolescents more sensitive to how they look and how others perceive them. Emotional ups and downs can intensify concerns about appearance and self-worth, making body image issues more prominent during this stage of life. Supportive relationships, positive self-talk, and media literacy can help adolescents develop a healthier body image.